

Triangle of Similarities

Small groups of three participants are formed, each group receives one triangle template. Each participant chooses one corner of the triangle. Now the participants look for similarities. These are either written in the middle if all people share them, or on one of the sides of the triangle if they are commonalities between two people. Special features of the individual persons can be written in the respective corners. If the number of participants cannot be divided by 3, lines, squares or pentagons of similarities can also be formed.
